

Clikia Corp. Announces New Management, New Business Plan After Executive/CEO Control Change; Company to Establish Private Jet Charter (Fractional Ownership) Business

Trego, WI, April 15, 2019 - Clikia Corp. (OTC PINK: CLKA) announced today that, in conjunction with a change-in-control transaction, the company has adopted a new business plan that calls for it to establish a private jet charter operation and aircraft maintenance business based in Wisconsin. Dean E. Sukowatey, a veteran businessman, has acquired voting-controlling ownership of the company from former company CEO David Loflin, who has resigned from all company positions.

"I am a pilot, and aviation is my life's passion. We are extremely excited for this opportunity to build a robust private jet charter operation and aircraft maintenance company in what I believe to be a high-demand, short-supply industry," said Dean E. Sukowatey, CLKA's new CEO. "I have been working on what now is our company's new business plan for several years, so I was ready to seize this great opportunity when it recently presented itself," Mr. Sukowatey added.

Mr. Sukowatey further advised that the company, in conjunction with its private jet charter efforts, intends to establish a complementary aviation maintenance facility at a to-be-determined airfield in Wisconsin. Mr. Sukowatey indicated that the company has partnered with and brought on board a dedicated aviation staff with over fifty (50) combined years of aircraft maintenance experience, and an experienced operations manager with thirty (30) years of operational aviation management experience.

On April 12, 2019, in a press release, CLKA announced the cessation of its Clikia video streaming service: <https://backend.otcmarkets.com/otcapi/company/dns/news/document/35790/content>.
