Disaster recovery efforts led by the federal government through FEMA, state government emergency response programs, and city or county emergency response programs require entities to be registered and cleared thru the System for Award Management (SAM). Greene Concepts successfully completed validation requirements and currently is awaiting issuance of Commercial and Government Entity Codes (“CAGE codes”). CAGE codes are unique identifier assigned to suppliers to various government or defense agencies and provide a standardized method of identifying a given facility at a specific location.

Greene Concepts Inc. expedited application efforts in order to become registered and available to provide assistance for any disaster or emergency relief effort.

The COVID-19 pandemic has created intense volatility in the financial markets in the last two weeks and turned what was an incredible bull market into a potential recession. Publicly listed companies have a special responsibility to communicate the impact of the pandemic on their operations.

We believe that Greene Concepts Inc. has a special obligation to the nation and the community in which we reside to make our resources available in any emergency relief effort.

The Company’s bottling facility is a strategically important asset by possessing a total of seven (7) operational wells. The facility is located within the Pisgah National Forest with an enormous source of pure spring water accessed from the aquifer located deep below the national forest.

While the bottling facility can operate at full capacity with a single primary well the Company’s facility has the unique strategic advantage of having six additional operational wells as backup in the unlikely event of any system failures with the primary or any other well.

Each shareholder should take pride in the fact that you personally have supported Greene Concepts, your company, to revitalize a bottling plant that could very well be a mission critical supplier of bottled water in this or any other disaster relief effort.

We look forward to building a strong profitable business through service to our customers, community and nation.
